It is interesting to see how old ideas from the 1600s still influence our world today. John locke belie that we only know what we can see and touch. This means things like money and objects have become the most important part of out lives. In past, rich people sh this off with oil paintings of their land. Today, we d the same thing with social media.

e are definitely still living with these ideas. Apps like instagram and TikTok have taken the place of those old paintings. When an influencer shows off a certain outfit or a fancy vacation, they are showi their status. Advertising tells us that if we buy these things, we will be happy. This is the idea utilitarianism, which says that if something gives s pleasure, it is good.

see this in my own life with digital items. Even if cannot touch a skin in a video game, we still want it cause it gives us a sense of status, and when multiple ple get the skin, it makes others want to get it because it make these status. Advert... these things, we will be happy. This is the idea of utilitarianism, which says that if something gi us pleasure, it is good.

I see this in my own life with digital items. Even if we cannot touch a skin in a video game, we still want it because it gives us a sense of status, and when multiple people get the skin, it makes others want to get it because it makes them feel like they belong. It makes feel like we own something special.

There is a huge downside to this which is the fact that if we only care about what we own;
Then money becomes the most important thing in our li